The assistant-to-the-manger idea, originated by Charley Comiskey, is becoming an American League habit.

Frank Navin, president of the Detroit team, which will be recalled as the Tigers of the organization before it acquired a disposition like a pet kitten, has signed Jimmy Burke to assist Hugh Jennings.

Navin believes Jennings would have obtained better results from the raft of material provided for him this year had he some one to aid him, as did Callahan of the White Sox and Mack of the Athletics. Some one to give the youngsters a real tryout, instead of being satisfied with a personal "once-over."

"The time has come," as others besides the Walrus have noted, when coaches for major league teams are Hugh Jennings and Jimmy Burke, His New Assistant Trainer.
